| What          | A government procurement is the acquisition of goods, services or works from an external source by a government. Some governments may use the terms "tender" or "contract" instead. Results of procurement processes are either indicated on the national portal or on the external platform used by the government                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Why           | Crucial for transparency, ensuring accountability, and fostering public trust by demonstrating fair and responsible use of taxpayer funds.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
